Taylor Swift is fans' star SNF attraction

Chris Bumbaca
USA TODAY

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — The last time Taylor Swift entered MetLife Stadium it was as a performer, the third of three nights she played in the stadium as part of her "Eras Tour" in May. On Sunday, she was just a spectator, cheering on Travis Kelce as his Kansas City Chiefs faced the New York Jets on "Sunday Night Football."

For the many Chiefs — and Jets — fans in attendance, the rumored Swift-Kelce relationship represented the apex of the hype surrounding the organization's "Winning Era," a stretch that has included three Super Bowl appearances (two championships) and plenty of victories.

"I've never seen this much attention paid to the Chiefs," said Chiefs fan Josh Mayer, from Reading, Pennsylvania. "Every single TV show is talking about it, which is nice. Every TikTok I've seen is all about the Chiefs and how these Swifties are into football. It's like 'Oh, this is cool.'"

Mayer, 41, remembers the pre-Patrick Mahomes period when the franchise was hardly worthy of expanded intrigue.

"Now to finally be something and with (Kelce) in the public image? It's cool," he said. "And I love all the attention. People who want to jump on? Why not?"

Mayer was walking through the parking lot with his stepdaughter Courtney Bowles. A 16-year-old Swiftie, Bowles was down to go to the game regardless of whether Swift was there.

"I'd be shocked if she was here if she was at the last game," Bowles said. Front Office Sports reported earlier last week Swift would attend the "SNF" matchup. On Saturday, Page Six reported that Swift dined in New York City with Brittany Mahomes and actors Blake Lively and Sophie Turner.

Sure enough, about 40 minutes prior to kickoff, Swift led a star-studded crew that included Lively, Ryan Reynolds and Hugh Jackman through a security station near the stadium's loading dock.

Three hours earlier in stadium parking lot 1, Swift's "Love Story" blared on a speaker system as charter buses unloaded and fans began tailgating. The general sentiment among several "Swifties" in attendance seemed to be that they were in favor of the celebrity couple.

"I think it's nice she found almost her equal, obviously in a different career, but kind of someone who is career-driven and passionate as he is about their work," said Joanna Gruenberg, a Long Beach, New York, native.

Gruenberg and her friends were considering attending Sunday night's game already, but once the rumors of Swift's potential appearance began swirling, they were convinced they had to be there.

"Knowing that she might be here solidified the deal for us," said Katie McGoldrick, another Long Beach native. "But it wasn't confirmed yet when we bought the tickets. But it made us more excited."

"We're gonna keep our eyes peeled on the jumbotron. I'm really trying to see her. That'd be nice — make my day."

Jennifer Steinhilb has been following Swift since she opened for Brad Paisley 17 years ago. The Steinhilb family had one of the better decorations at their tailgate setup, a pink flag that said "Taylor Swift 2024: Save America Again."

"I'm just happy for her," said Steinhilb, 34, who's from Sparta, New Jersey. "She deserves the world."

One tailgating crew had an entire Swift playlist going, as "Blank Space" turned into "Style" and other hits.

"My one concern is what if he gets nervous in front of her and drops the ball?" said Jodi Cobb, a Kansas City resident and Chiefs fan who traveled for the game.

Lauren Stevko has been a "Kelce girl" for the past six years, she said.

"So I know he's built himself up," said Stevko, 30, "but Taylor just adds to it."

And how does one become a "Kelce girl?"

"He's just an attractive guy," said the Patchogue, New York, native.

Stevko's friend, Lea Morace, has high expectations for the relationship.

"I kind of believe this one is going to work out," said Morace, 65. "They're going to get married, have children — settle down. It's gonna happen one, two, three."

Stevko can support that future. But it's still early, she said, and they deserve time and space.

"I feel like they're just figuring it out," Stevko said. "If it ends up they get married, have kids, sounds great. But they're humans. Everyone's following them like a publicity thing — which I get."

Deion errs in letting DaBaby speak to Colorado team

Mike Freeman
Columnist
USA TODAY

This is who University of Colorado coach Deion Sanders invited to speak to his players before they played Southern Cal.

In 2021, rapper DaBaby made a series of ugly homophobic and misogynistic remarks at a concert. He also spread misinformation about HIV and AIDS. His remarks were so awful, and so damaging, that Elton John condemned him.

"We've been shocked to read about the HIV misinformation and homophobic statements made at a recent DaBaby show," John wrote. "This fuels stigma and discrimination and is the opposite of what our world needs to fight the AIDS epidemic." He added: "HIV misinformation and homophobia have no place in the music industry. We must break down the stigma around HIV and not spread it. As musicians, it's our job to bring people together."

GLAAD blasted DaBaby. Madonna criticized him. Questlove did as well. "Right to right & his actions are wrong," Questlove said. "Somebody gotta say it: Homophobia/Transphobia/Xenophobia/Misogyny/Racism—this should go w/o saying is morally wrong."

DaBaby lost sponsorships and festival slots. He had supporters, but overall his words, his terrible words, were one of the biggest stories in the music industry at the time because of how so many people in it rallied to condemn him.

This is who University of Colorado coach Deion Sanders invited to speak to his players before they played USC on Saturday.

DaBaby shot and killed a man, saying he did so in self-defense. He assaulted a female fan prior to a concert. There are other problematic accusations.

This is who University of Colorado coach Deion Sanders invited to speak to his players before they played USC on Saturday.

Sanders was trying to rally his team prior to facing a tough opponent but that's who he picked to help him? Sanders couldn't find someone who didn't spread hate, who didn't kill someone, who didn't slap a woman?

There was really no one else better than DaBaby? "I got somebody else who went through something," Sanders says in the video as he introduces DaBaby. "Who dealt with some issues. That had to regroup. Veered off a little bit. Got back on track..."

I'd argue that DaBaby didn't go "through something." He made his own situation. It wasn't done to him. He also wasn't just dealing with some issues. He caused pain in the LGBTQ+ community by spreading dangerous misinformation.

Not to mention the message you're sending to young men by putting someone in front of them who assaulted a woman.

Criticizing Sanders now may seem like a contradiction to a recent column I wrote saying how Colorado is Black America's team. But it's not a contradiction at all. Multiple things can be accurate. The truth is, Sanders' arc is going to be long and complicated. It will be part greatness and inspiration, and it will also be thorny and lined with missteps. This is one of those missteps.

Sanders was attempting to show his players that you can come back from adversity. His team was blown out by Oregon last week and Sanders was looking for a way to show the players that they will always face adversity. It's how you respond to it that matters.

And DaBaby has every right to try and climb back from self-induced cancellation. There are also plenty of horrible people who come back from making mistakes. DaBaby's behavior, however, was so ugly and extreme, any type of message about redemption is lost. What has DaBaby done that shows he's worked to change his views? What's he done to justify that important platform Sanders gave him?

There will certainly be young players who will love hearing from DaBaby, and I'll get a number of old man yelling at clouds gifs sent my way. However, I ask again: There was no one better?

No one? Really? Sanders doesn't need to have anyone like DaBaby speak to his program. It's going to reach remarkable heights because there is no one in the country that's a better recruiter than Sanders. Colorado is going to win a national title. It's only a matter of time.

So, this is who University of Colorado coach Deion Sanders invited to speak to his players before they played USC on Saturday.

It was DaBaby, who didn't deserve to be there.

This was Sanders' first big mistake at Colorado.
